INTRODUCTION

Wolfgang Richter's *Grundlagen einer Hebräischen Grammatik (GAHG)*¹, nos. 8, 10, and 13 of Arbeiten zu Text und Sprache im alten Testament (St. Ottilien: EOS Verlag, 1978, 1979, 1980) has garnered favorable attention since its release. A serious drawback, however, is its lack of an index to the biblical references, which are found mainly in the extensive footnotes.

This index, which is also incorporated into my Cumulative Scripture Index of Hebrew Grammar & Syntax (Winona Lake: Eisenbrauns, 1996), makes Richter's work accessible to exegetes who want to avail themselves of his insights regarding particular texts. References are by volume (1, 2, 3), page, and note number (n = "footnote"). For example, means that Genesis 1.6 is referred to twice: volume 2, page 45, footnote 195, and volume 3, page 80, footnote 219. Most references are in footnotes in the third volume (Der Satz (Satztheorie)); 2 Samuel is the most frequently referenced book. References are listed in canonical order according to BHS.

Gen 1.6 2:45 n195, 3:80 n219
